4TH. MARCH 2010

Highlights:

- No second food festival
- Books cost £5
- Available from Corper Deli, No. 65, Hush, The Bay Tree, Sainsbury's
- Preston Area YE final at University of Central Lancashire on 29/04/'10

The Taste Young Enterprise team from Longridge High School would like to announce that there will unfortunately be no food festival in the coming year, after the successful event last November.

The team reached their decision at the weekly meeting last Tuesday, 2nd. March, because of the proximity of the event to their GCSE examinations. The event would also be too close to the final presentation and would be impractical to try to organise two important events at once. The final presentation is where all five of Preston area's Young Enterprise companies come together to give their final presentation to the judges. The winning team is then put through to the Lancashire area final, followed by the north west final and eventually the national final – if they are that lucky! The presentation takes place on the 29th. April at the University of Central Lancashire in Preston.

The team would like to point out that the famous recipe book is now available in the Corper Deli, on Market Place, Café No. 65, Hush and The Bay Tree, all on Berry Lane for only £5. The book features special recipes donated by local chefs and famous people; Paul Heathcote, Nigel Howarth, Nick Park and Alex Coward to name but a few.
